

Green Building Material Developed and Introduced

A compound enzyme earth hardener, a green building material, is being used in the DPRK.

It can be used as a building material additive in making blocks and roofing tiles and paving roads.

The hardener is high in quality indexes, like compression strength, freeze resistance and water resistance.

Its advantages are that it reduces the cost of construction and makes a positive contribution to protecting the ecological environment.