

The Sacred Name Shining Over the World

The progressive people of the world named streets, libraries and other units after President Kim Il Sung as a reflection of their wish to convey the revolutionary exploits of the eternal President of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, who illustrated the road humankind should follow, by creating the immortal Juche idea and led their independent cause to victory.

The units named after him numbered over 480 in more than a hundred countries between 1945, the year when Korea was liberated from the Japanese military occupation, to the end of the 1990s, and the number is still increasing in the new century.
