

Earnest Request

It happened one January day in 2017, when the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un was looking round the newly-built workers' hostel at the Pyongyang Kim Jong Suk Silk Mill.

Making the rounds of the workers' hostel, he gave advice on how to improve its conditions. Upon reaching the corridor on the third floor, he told officials that the temperature seemed to be low.

One of the officials said that they were planning to take necessary steps for maintaining a warm temperature.

Comrade Kim Jong Un stressed that an efficient heating system should be in place at the workers' hostel, before continuing: You need to keep the geothermal equipment in operation for two or three days in order to increase the temperature in the hostel. After that, the hostel should be inaugurated so that the workers could live in warm rooms.
