

A Matter of Serious Concern

It was one August day in 2014, one of the hottest days of the year, when the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un visited the Chollima Tile Factory.

Being shown around several places of the factory, he halted at the midsection of a kiln in the marble tile workshop.

Casting his eyes around the interior of the workshop, he asked the accompanying officials what the indoor temperature was.

Hearing the answer, he said in a worried voice that it would not be good for the workers' health if they kept working there.

He resumed that they should take decisive steps for protecting the workers' health. He suggested automating the tile packaging process, adding that it would not be difficult to automate the process as new tiles were moving along conveyor belts.

After a while, he said: When planning to build a factory, it is necessary to consider everything carefully at the designing stage so as to provide workers with good environment. It is also important to adopt thoroughgoing measures to eliminate excessive heat and reduce noise when installing additional equipment in the future.
